The symphony concert Sunday afternoon auspiciously marked the beginning of the second half of the 1925-26 season. Bernard Seigert, cellist, the soloist, repeated his triumph of last season. His playing of the Saint-Saens concerto in A was so enthusiastically received, he was forced to respond with an encore, "Carnegie," by d'Ambrosia.

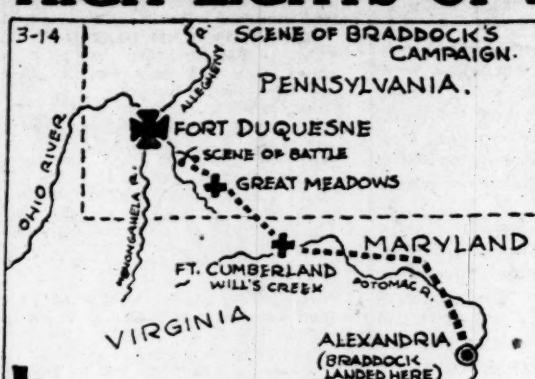

Enrico Leide was given an ovation when the "Blue Danube" was played and he was forced to repeat it. The audience went away thrilled and enthusiastic over the whole program which closed with the "Veil Dance" and the "Entrance March" from "Queen of Sheba" by Goldmark. Despite the rain the program was played to a capacity house.

Among those seen in the audience were former Governor and Mrs. John M. Slaton, Mrs. Albert H. Thornton, Mr. and Mrs. Edgar Neely, Colonel William L. Peel, Miss Emmie Little, Mr. and Mrs. Hugh Hodgson, Harvey T. Phillips, James B. Nevin, Mr. and Mrs. Lee Ashcraft, Mr. and Mrs. Ivan Allen, Mr. and Mrs. Featon O. Stone, Mrs. Chiff Hatcher, Mr. and Mrs. George Branner, Mrs. M. L. Throver, Mrs. Norman Sharpe, Mr. and Mrs. Will Akers.

Mr. and Mrs. Edward Bishop, Mr. and Mrs. Will Meadows, Mrs. Irving S. Thomas, Mrs. Charles Rice, Mr. and Mrs. John M. Cooper, Mrs. Anne Bates Walsh, W. E. Chapin, Mr. and Mrs. George H. Bellinger, Professor T. J. Simmons, of Gainesville, Dr. and Mrs. W. C. Jarnagin, Mrs. Alonzo Richardson, Mr. and Mrs. Dudley Cowles, Mr. and Mrs. John L. Westmoreland, Mr. and Mrs. Julian V.

HIGH LIGHTS OF HISTORY

The First British Campaign. by J. CARROLL MANSFIELD

EARLY IN 1755 THE ENGLISH PLANNED A GENERAL ATTACK ON THE FRENCH FRONTIER FORTS. THE LARGEST EXPEDITION WAS TO BE SENT AGAINST FORT DUQUESNE AT THE FORKS OF THE OHIO, AND GENERAL BRADDOCK WAS SENT OVER FROM ENGLAND TO COMMAND IT. BRADDOCK BROUGHT WITH HIM A FORCE OF BRITISH REGULAR TROOPS, VETERANS OF EUROPEAN WARS.

BRADDOCK WAS A BRAVE SOLDIER BUT ENTIRELY IGNORANT OF INDIAN WARS. HE WAS JOINED BY GEORGE WASHINGTON WITH 450 RIFLEMEN. THE GENERAL ONLY SCOFFED AT THESE POORLY DRILLED BACKWOODSMEN, ALTHOUGH EVERY MAN WAS A DEAD SHOT AND A TRAINED SCOUT.

THE HEADSTRONG BRADDOCK WOULD TAKE NO ADVICE FROM WASHINGTON, AND DECLINED THE OFFERS OF FRIENDLY INDIANS TO HELP HIM AGAINST THE FRENCH. HE BELIEVED THE ENEMY WOULD FLEE WHEN THEY SAW HIS REDCOATS LINED UP IN BATTLE FORMATION.

IN EARLY SUMMER, 1755, THE EXPEDITION, 2,000 STRONG, SET OUT WITH DRUMS BEATING AND FLAGS FLYING TO MARCH ON FORT DUQUESNE IN THE FOREST. IN THE REAR OF THE COLUMN WAS A LONG TRAIN OF WAGONS LOADED WITH SUPPLIES AND AMMUNITION. BRADDOCK'S DEFEAT.

Snorty or Willie.

In Sunday school Snorty Jim and Willie Brewster both perform well. A choice could not be made between them. In the school room both appear to be sprouting wings when teacher's glance drifts their way. But these are not the real testing grounds. It is the playground, street and home which brings out Snorty's and Willie's true character. I wish to know which is the better boy? Which would you choose for a son? Between ourselves which do you like the better?

Remember that in a show window, one boy, like an automobile, is about as good as another. Speed, grace, distance and Old Father Time are what put boys and cars to the test. I'll wager that Snorty's parents do not know him half as well as I do. And as for little Willie, I have seen thousands like him. Now let us study their characters. Can you see them? Freckle-faced, snub-nosed Snorty Jim, and hair-brained, round face-always-washed Willie. From that fellows here tell me—which is your choice?

When dad or mother underscores the right word they are telling me their choice. When you, my boy, or you, my girl, fill out the blank, you are unconsciously telling me which you like about yourselves as well as about Snorty and Willie. Here's where the whole family participates. Remember, underscore each answer. Get your pencils—let's go!

The Downfall of a Wise Priest

If you have read the "Iliad," you know about the legend of the Greek capture of Troy. The capture was made, according to the poem, by means of a trick. By hiding in hollow wooden horse, Greek warriors were able to get behind the walls of Troy. Once there, they waited until night and then opened the gates of the city. The rest of the Greeks had only pretended to go away. Stealing back, they rushed through the open gates and had little trouble in defeating the Trojans. The "Iliad" was supposed to have been composed by a blind poet named Homer. Greeks enjoyed the poem, and were fond of telling about the heroes of former times. Stories not found in Homer grew up.

One of the later stories told of a priest named Laocoon. This priest was placed in the vatican. It

4,178 ARRESTED BY VICE SQUAD IN YEAR'S WORK

According to the report for 1925 for the Atlanta vice squad, issued Sunday night by Lieutenant E. S. Acree, 4,178 cases were made during the year, and of this number 1,112 defendants were bound over to the state courts by the recorder and 208 sent direct to the Fulton county jail.

The recorder fined 2,632 persons brought before him by members of the vice squad during the year $18,182. In cases taken to the state court, $44,975 was collected in fines.

With the orchestra for accompaniment, he gave Saint-Saens' Concerto in A Minor, extracting every bit of beauty in the famous work and proving anew the marvelous technique that rests in his fingers when he caresses the strings of a violin.

Mr. Siegert was forced to give an encore, playing an entrancing Italian serenade for his second number.

Goldmark's Masterpiece.

If it had not been that it was given last place on the program, with the consequent falling curtain to cut short the afternoon's entertainment, it is probable that the orchestra would have compelled another encore in the form of a repetition of the "Entrance March" from "The Queen of Sheba." Goldmark's colorful masterpiece. The thrilling bombast of this music evidently appealed to the representative Atlanta audience and, so enthused were all by its martial pomp, that applause began even before the last chords had been sounded. Calling on the full strength of the great orchestra of 70 pieces, the march can only be described as thrilling. It carries throughout the flavor of the Orient, and its tone picture is so compelling that, as the music is played, the eye cannot but see the solemn tread of mighty army, with flashing scimitars and clashing cymbals, with whirling dervishes and waving plumes, with throbbing tom-toms and slaves in clanking chains.

The Veil Dance, from the same work, preceded the march.

The program opened with Gluck's peculiar life overture to Orpheus, and, in addition to the numbers mentioned, included Chopin's Nocturne from Opus 48. This composition is strikingly unlike the usual conception of a nocturne, and furnished another dramatic thrill.

It was undoubtedly one of the most popular programs ever presented by Atlanta's orchestra, and if ever the idea of going over old programs and picking the favorites of them all for a resume concert is put into practice it is almost certain that at least two of Sunday's numbers will have to be included.

Leide Is Praised.

Conductor Leide was the recipient of much praise as he left the theater, and many remarked that his statement of Saturday that the orchestra had reached a higher pinnacle of artistic perfection for this concert than ever before, had been proven true beyond contradiction.

The next concert, the sixth of the 1925-26 season, will be given January 17. The program announced is as follows:

1. Overture to "La Dame Blanche"—Boieldieu.
2. Concerto in A Minor, for Piano and Orchestra, Opus 16—Grieg. Rostia Renard.
3. Three Dances from "Ruslan and Lyudmila"—Tchaikovsky.
4. Andante from "Moonlight Sonata"—Beethoven.
5. First Movement from "VI Symphony"—Tchaikovsky—Tchaikovsky.
6. Irish Rhapsody—Herbert.

The GILDED ROSE

CHAPTER No. 31.

Fashionable Night-Life.

Rosilyn had never seen a fashionable night club.

This was a smallish one and Briscoe was well known to the management.

Though it was long past "hours," being indeed well after midnight, her escort was supplied with liberal refreshment—cocktails, "fizz," and "fudge." A good place to know, if one is thirsty, he observed. They've been caught by the police once, so they're rather careful whom they serve.

Rosilyn gazed about the place. There were shoals of lean and dark young men with chocolate eyes, and too-perfectly cut evening jackets, too-shiny heads, too-prestigious glances.

Most of the women had a haggard air, too. They seemed anxious, neither young nor old. Flat-bosomed, hipless, they danced with a boneless, a simoniac movement, almost like the pouring of a fluid.

Practically every head was shingled. Only two or three were bobbed. Rosilyn realized at once that her own coiffure was old-fashioned in comparison to these.

In the center of the room—which was not very large—there was a square for dancing. A five-piece orchestra—two of its members being negroes—occupied a small raised dais. When the music started almost everybody made a bee line for the dancing floor, where—packed like sardines in a tin—they joggled uncomfortably, yet with a curiously rapid look upon their faces.

"Do they really enjoy it? They look awfully serious-like—what's the world—like 'devotees'?" the girl said to her companion.

"It's the fashion. And it seems to fascinate them. Maybe you'll get the craze of 'devotees'?"

"I'm sure I shan't." She shook her head.

He poured out some refreshment for her. Almost absent-mindedly, she sipped it, her eyes watching the couples and quartettes about her.

A warmth stole to her cheeks. The wine was very potent. Briscoe poured out more for her, and she began to talk, to sparkle, in a way that she had never done before.

"After all, why shouldn't one enjoy one's life?" she queried. "Why not seize every little chance of happiness one can?"

"Admirably spoken, little lady!" Briscoe tilted up his glass in honor of the sentiment.

"Everyone in the world ought to be happy."

"Quite a little Hedonist you are!" "What's that?"

"He smiled at her again. 'A wise person who believes in the greatest happiness of the greatest number.'"

"Is that philosophy?" "John Stuart Mill," he answered, with a laugh. "I remember my college days."

For a moment she looked pensive. "I tried once to read Plato on 'Ethics.' And a man called Aristotle. He was about the part I liked best. But these people in this room seemed to have solved it better."

"Bravo! You'll soon be quite a little sardine!"

"A—what?"

"A person who takes what the gods offer and doesn't worry about the rights and wrongs of things too much. You know—one crowded hour of glorious life—'as the poet has it—that's worth an age without a name.' D'you get my meaning?"

The girl wrinkled her forehead. "That doctrine—sounds—dangerous, doesn't it?"

The man beside her leant a little nearer, flashing a beam from his cool grey eyes. They were not cool at the moment, but held a burning spark.

"Nothing's worth while unless it has a spice of danger in it! Don't you know that, child?"

An enjoyable event of the holiday season was the Christmas party Wednesday afternoon at the home of Mrs. J. W. Wood on Atlanta avenue to the Mothers' class of St. Paul church.

Mrs. Traher, Mrs. Castleberry and Mrs. Ruder were the hostesses. The house throughout was decorated with yuletide suggestions, having as its central attractions an ornamental tree, shadings lights, bells and a profusion of evergreens carried out the effect.

Mrs. W. H. Coppedge, who has been teacher for the past five years, and in appreciation of her service the class presented her with a set of salad forks. Delicious refreshments were served by the hostesses.

Steamer Lands Two American Liquor Agents Found Adrift at Sea

(By Leased Wire to The Constitution and The Chicago Tribune.)

London, January 3.—Two American prohibition agents have been landed at Gibraltar from the steamer Newby Hall, according to the correspondent of the Sunday Express, who says that the pair—Charles Smith and Frank Mitchell—were picked up at sea December 20, 300 miles off the American coast.

The men said they left Boston December 8 in a motor boat to carry prohibition work along the coast and that their engine broke down, forcing them to drift for 12 days in a stormy sea.

Just— A Statement of Facts

WHEN we started blending benzol with gasoline and selling the blend under the trade name of Woco Pep we made motor fuel history. Other dealers, when they could secure the benzol, have attempted competitive mixtures.

Woco Pep is the only benzol blend motor fuel sold in Atlanta today.

We control the only dependable supply of benzol in this territory.

We always have enough benzol to keep Woco Pep up to a carefully determined standard.

We have so popularized the use of benzol that in order to renew our contracts we are compelled to pay a price that makes Woco Pep cost us more than we have to pay for the highest grade of straight gasoline.

We are willing to absorb a portion of this extra cost, but we can't absorb it all.

That, briefly and frankly, is the reason we are charging two cents more per gallon for Woco Pep than for Purul Gasoline.

FIVE MAJOR CAGE GAMES BULLED HERE THIS WEEK

Boxing-Bulldog Contest Tops Program Including A.A.C., J.P.C. and Furman ARMY SEEKING British Champs Bobby and Watts, 3 and 2 HUSKE COACH CLAIMS RAW DEAL Atlanta Golf Stars Keep In Trim Playing Winter Golf on Florida Courses

BY ROY E. WHITE.

Basketball will have its fling in Atlanta this week, for a total of five major league games will be played on local courts before the week has passed. The first will be played tonight on the Fort McPherson court, when the Twenty-second Infantry and Furman university quints meet at 8 o'clock.

The biggest game of the week, and one of the most colorful games of the season, will be played Friday night on the Georgia Tech court, when the Georgia Bulldogs and the Tech Jacks meet in the first of three games that will be played between them this season.

Tech and Georgia have always played great games against each other and the basketball game slated for Friday night will be no exception to the rule. As it will probably be the best basketball game of the local season.

Long Practice Held.

Tech started basketball practice soon after the football season was over, and Georgia also began work in Athens, making ready to meet the Jacks in the first collegiate game of the season.

The Bulldogs have played three games already and each game was won by a wide margin, over the famous Albany Y. quints, the Macon Y. M. C. A. and Westminster, formerly the Atlanta Y. M. C. A. five.

Coach Hammett's Jacks have played four games thus far, winning two and losing two, but those games were played in Havana, Cuba, against the strongest basketball teams on the Cuban island.

An interesting game will be played Tuesday night on the J. P. C. court, when the J. P. C. five and the Furman university teams meet. Furman was decisively defeated Saturday night by the local A. A. C. team, but the Purple Hurricane from South Carolina put up a great fight and scored a total of 28 points, which is enough to win any ordinary basketball game.

McDonald Brothers Coming.

Wednesday night the famous McDonald brothers, who were members of the North Carolina university quints that won the southern conference title two successive years, oppose the Jewish Progressives. The McDonald boys are members of the Charlotte Y. M. C. A. and several other members of that famous Carolina quints are members of the Charlotte Y.

The climax of the week will come on Saturday night when the A. A. C. five meets the Fort Benning officers on the Auburn avenue court.

The complete schedule of the week follows:

Monday, January 4.—Fort McPherson vs. Furman.

Tuesday, January 5.—J. P. C. vs. Furman.

Wednesday, January 6.—J. P. C. vs. Furman.

Week's Sports Calendar Offers Interesting List

New York, January 3.—(AP)—Quintions said to have eliminated the champion will defend his title in the first full week of 1926—a week brimming with important sports events. Football, hockey, golf, skating, basketball, boxing, basketball—all offer interesting programs.

Edouard Hornam, one of Europe's very few titlholders, risks his recently gained 182 lb. line billiard crown in a match with Jack Schaefer, former champion, starting in Chicago tomorrow night. Eric Hagelacher, of Germany, will meet the winner of this match sometime in March.

Two championships in boxing will be at stake within the next two months—in the middleweight and welterweight divisions. Mickey Walker, welter champion, faces Tommy Milligan, of Scotland, in New York January 23 and February 26 Harry Greb, of Pittsburgh, long leader among the middleweight contenders, in the opinion of the New York state athletic commission, Tiger Flowers, of Atlanta. Tex Rickard, New York promoter, in his predictions for 1926, figures that Greb will lose his title some time within the next 12 months and that Walker will retain his. Many of the predictions made by Rickard a year ago came true.

William G. Fowles, Jr., of Pittsburgh, will become president of the United States Golf association, at the annual session Chicago Saturday, which will follow two meetings of the greens section.

An enthusiastic golfer and "father" of the Oakland course over which the last amateur championship was played, Fowles is expected to put the event game into even greater stride. He is a former amateur champion and is expected to captain the 1926 Walker cup team in its invasion of England.

Prospects are for retention of the present hall at this year's meeting, leaving the experts another season in which to test their wits in the hitting power and other considerations.

Washington, January 3.—(AP)—A slogan "athletes for all" to govern army sports, coupled with a hard and fast ruling for strict adherence to amateurism in military games and bouts, has been laid down in a general order by the war department.

Professional events at army posts are to be permitted only when "clearly advertised and announced as professional," and local laws governing boxing or Sunday baseball are to be complied with strictly by post commanders.

Army participation through individual or team entries in events arranged by civilian officials is to be favored. The direct and stress is to be laid on inter-unit competitive games annually wherever practicable.

In events at army posts, no cash prizes are to be offered in future and events are to be open only to army personnel, including the national guard and reservists and to the navy and marine corps.

"If in such military meets it so happens that amateurs compete against persons who have previously violated amateur rules, it will be considered a disgraceful exhibition," the order continued.

National collegiate association rules are to govern army contests, and the order directed that boxing contests at army posts be set forth that the sport is to be encouraged as an athletic exercise and care taken that it does not lose its character. "It shall be no color of professionalism or commercialism," they will be restricted to military contenders. Where an admission fee is charged, the order directed that the fee be for the use of the contestants in any one event or bout shall be from outside the military service.

The Bulldogs have shown improvement in each game this season. A strong team represents the Red and Black on the indoor court this season. Stiff opposition is sure to be found on this week's program for Furman, which is expected to be hard, and both teams should aid in showing the real strength of this year's team.

St. Augustine, Fla., January 3.—(AP)—Archie Compton, British professional golf champion for 1925, and Arnold Massey, former British open champion and four-time holder of the French open championship, made their American debut on the St. Augustine links today and defeated Bobby Jones and Watts Gunn, Atlanta amateurs, who won top honors in the last American amateur championship. The score of the 36-hole match was 3 to 2. Compton and Massey were 1 up at the end of the morning round.

It was the first time Jones and Gunn have been partners in a four-ball match since last spring, when they won by 5 and 3 in an 18-hole match over the East Lake course in Atlanta, which included many golf notables who came from resorts all over the state, was one man who followed the players on crutches and another who went around carrying a baby in his arms.

MONTE CARLO

By E. PHILLIPS OPPENHEIM

SYNOPSIS.
Sir Hargrave Wendever, country gentleman and financier, calls on a famous London physician for examination, and is told he cannot live for more than six or eight months. Wendever takes the blow standing, and decides to go on with his plans for the winter as though nothing had happened. However, feeling the urge to give a lift to some poor fellow creature, he experiments on those with whom he comes in contact, until he finds one in need of help. This proves to be a delicate-looking moustache girl who serves him regularly. He offers Violet Martin and a number of her family a vacation at Monte Carlo. She persuades her fiancé, Robert, to act as her brother and they tell Sir Hargrave they will go. In Monte Carlo their host tells them they are free to do as they please, and gives them plenty of spending money, and places a car at their disposal. Hargrave renews his acquaintance with the charming Princess Stephanie Putraka.

INSTALLMENT XIX.
—A RASH PROMISE.

Wendever stirred his coffee thoughtfully. No one but himself knew how tight a hold he had kept upon his inclinations during the last few days. Stephanie's warning and his own dimly awakened feelings had been always in his mind. Still, there were limits to the restrictions he had forced upon himself the pleasure of seeing Violet happy.

"Would you like to go a little higher up into the mountains than you have been yet?" he asked her—"up to Mont Agel with me and lunch and walk around while I play a hole or two of golf? I need some exercise and I'm rather bored with the tennis crowd."

"I shouldn't just like it," Violet told him sincerely, "it would be heavenly. I have been through La Turbie. Robert had an hour to spare the day before yesterday and we had tea at that pink place up there. But do you really mean it—lunch with you there? Don't you want to take some one to play with you?"

"I'd much rather take you," he answered. "I'll have a few holes before lunch and a few after. You don't by any chance play yourself, I suppose?"

"I have played," she admitted—"years ago. My father belonged to the little golf club in the village where I was born. He was the local doctor there, and he and the clergyman started it."

He concealed his surprise admirably. It occurred to him that he had never asked her a single question as to her parentage.

"So much the better," he declared. "You shall play with some of my clubs. I will go and complete my toilette and be down in twenty minutes. You won't find it any too warm," he added, glancing at her light frock.

"I'll put on a tweed skirt and jumper," she told him. "How heavenly!"

She met Robert as she flew up the stairs. He held out his arm and stopped her.

"Why the hurry?"

"I'm going to lunch with Sir Hargrave at Mont Agel and play golf," she answered, breathlessly.

"So that's what he's going to do this morning," served.

"No tennis at Cannes, eh?"

"No, he's taking me up to Mont Agel in half an hour, so you will have a whole long morning and afternoon to yourself. You can invite Mademoiselle Zelle to have an aperitif with you, and lunch if you will with some one else, and have tea with whomever you please. I'm off your hands."

"You seem pretty pleased about it," he remarked.

"Do you blame me?" she asked.

A wonderful morning! Violet sat proudly and happily by Hargrave's side, and he drove his runabout which was the envy of all the motorists in the place. The end of their journey was like entering paradise. They were on a level with the snows, almost with the clouds, but the whole place was bathed in sunshine, the air like wine. He took her out at once on to the links.

"Have your luncheon here, Johnson," he told the chauffeur. "We shall be at least two hours and a half."

There were few people playing and they were able to drive off from the first tee at once. Hargrave, putting his driver into Violet's hands, after a moment's hesitation, was amazed at the result. She drove with a fine, free swing, hitting the ball well down the course, and although she topped her next shot she atoned by a long putt on the first green. When they arrived on the second, he took her straight to the professional's shop.

"A set of lady's clubs and a bag at once," he ordered. "My dear child, you should have told me about this."

She colored with pleasure.

"I wasn't at all sure how I should play again," she said. "I used to be fairly good, but it was so long ago."

"I shall give you a half," he announced, as they emerged again. "I shall think myself lucky if I can hold my own."

They played the first few holes almost in silence, Violet fulfilling the promise of her first shot and almost breathless with excitement. From the dizzy height of the fourth tee they paused to look down for a moment upon the dazzling panorama below.

"Look at that speck on the road," Violet exclaimed—"right down as far as you can see. How fast it is moving!"

The speck on the road was a black motor bicycle, climbing the hill at a wicked speed. Hargrave frowned as he looked at it, and turned away.

"Some madman," he muttered—"deserves to break his neck!"

They played the whole eighteen holes before luncheon. Hargrave keenly interested and Violet rapturously happy. When they entered the restaurant, where a table in the window had been reserved for them, she gave another cry of wonder. The white peaks with which they were surrounded seemed almost within reach, a ribbon of blue mist hung over one of the nearer mountains, above all there was the sunlight. Hargrave watched his companion's face with a queer little sense of emotion. There was something childlike, almost pagan, in her worship of beauty.

"One must lunch," he whispered presently.

She turned around. After her brief visit to the clouds, she was entirely and warmly human.

"Why, I should hope so," she declared. "I was never so hungry in my life. And a cocktail! This is quite my happiest morning."

It was a good and excellent served lunch, and Violet's high spirits were infectious. Hargrave thrust problems behind him and let himself go. He devoted himself with complete success to his companion's entertainment. He was occasionally personal, and permitted himself to be paternally tender. She mocked at his affection of superior years.

"Do you know how old I am?" she asked him. "I have told you once, but you appear to forget. I am twenty-four years old. You are thirty-nine. I know because I looked you up in one of those books. There's no difference between us at all. You have no right to talk to me as though you'd lived in the world for years and years before I was born."

"How old is Robert?"

"Robert is twenty-five," she said. "He looks older, but then he has had rather a bad time and he hasn't the disposition which makes the best of things."

"Whether you had," he remarked, with a little smile.

She laughed outright, softly and musically, yet with a real ring of mirth.

"What you must have thought of me, growling and grumbling on my stool," she exclaimed. "I was so miserable those few days, though, and I never dreamed that you were to turn out to be my fairy prince."

"I wonder if I have," he reflected.

"Then don't wonder any more," she begged softly. "If, when the end of my visit comes, I die, I shall die happy, because I have known happiness. No one can say more. I was honest when I said I was starving for just this. I've had it and I don't mind. All that I feel is pity for people who have never once been really happy before they die."

"You generally have a thought for others," he observed.

"I have had one for you the last few mornings," she told him, tenderly but a little reproachfully. "I have hated to see you come in between four or five o'clock looking so tired. I have gone back to bed more than once with a headache."

He tried to remain indifferent.

"Life here makes demands upon one," he murmured.

"Necessarily?"

"You little inguisitress!"

"You don't mind?" she appealed. "How could I help thinking that it would be so good for you if you would have just one or two quiet evenings?"

"We'll have one together some time," he proposed rashly.

'Are Stocks Included?' Wall Street Questions During Prediction Orgy

Necessary To Refer to
"Past Performances" If Dependable Report on Outlook Is Formulated.

BY R. L. BARNUM.

New York, January 3.—To find an outlook for general business at the beginning of a year as bright and promising as that of the first week-end of 1924, it is necessary to go back to 1900 or 1901. Both 1900 and 1901 were years, too, when a great bull stock market was witnessed such as that of the year just closed. With financial, industrial and railroad leaders all over the country predicting continued prosperity, speculative Wall Street at the close of this week is asking what about the stock market? Before making any predictions regarding the stock market it might be well to point out what has already happened in the existing bull market, and where the market now stands. The upward price movement in the stock market now under way started in April of 1924 with the average price of 50 stocks, half rails and half industrials, at 82.26. When the upward price movement in the stock market began in April of 1924 it was safe for anybody to almost shut their eyes, in buying any seasoned dividend-paying stock because the time call money was down to 2 per cent and even lower and it was highly profitable to borrow money and buy dividend-paying stocks because the income return on the stocks bought was much more than the interest charges on the borrowed money.

Money Continued Easy.

Money continued easy until early this past autumn and from April of 1924 until this past autumn as a result of easy money, the stock market continued to advance with temporary declines to correct technical stock market conditions. During the last summer it looked as if the stock market had in some stocks discounted and over-discounted easy money, for in some cases prices of stocks were so high that the income return was less than the open market rate for money. But at that point a new factor came into the situation in the form of improvement in general trade exceeding all expectations. It was on October 25 that Chairman Gary of the U. S. Steel corporation, in a very optimistic speech before the American Steel Institute, predicted that before the meeting in May, steel manufacturers would be turning away orders adding that the country as a whole was on the eve of a period of great prosperity. That speech marked the beginning of renewed improvement in general trade and in the widespread increase in the belief that the great bull stock market beginning in April of 1924 was over. But it was not. This week after having declined 10 points from the early November new high record for all time, the stock market again made a new high for all time for the average price of 50 representative stocks. When the stock market began to show signs of being at the top last November, careful traders began to ask if the predicted improvement in general trade had not been fully discounted stock-market-wise, as had previously been the case with easy money. After the November decline ran its course, however, again a new factor came into the stock market in the form of merger rumors involving first rails, then industrial companies, then oil companies, then steel companies, then banks. The new high made this week for the average price of 50 representative stocks was made on consolidations and mergers of considerable importance. The highest rate on call money for four successive days in five years.

Look for Easier Call Money.

Speculative Wall Street is looking forward to easier call money with the turn of the year because during the recent advance in call money rates there was no advance in time money. Speculative Wall street expects easier call money to be accompanied by an active stock market with higher prices for rails, oils, motors, steels and some shares.

Undoubtedly the situation and outlook for the railroads, for the automobile manufacturers and for the steel and oil industries is decidedly promising. But the point for careful investors and speculators to keep in mind is that prices of stocks are already high, the new high of 1924 established early this week in the average price of 50 representative stocks comparing with the 82.28 April of 1924. In this advance the index climbed from 103.26 to 125.24 with the rails up from 57.80 to 85.13.

We have had a sensational bull stock market with the interest shares advancing much more than the rails. Prices of stocks, especially industrials, are high. A great mass of favorable news has been announced which means that there is just that much more favorable news to be discounted stock-market-wise. The big outside public is heavily committed to the long side of the market. Hence loans are high. Some stocks, such as rails, oils, motors, coppers, steels, closed the week with the appearance of a new market. Hence loans are high. Ted Coggeshall, of Clayton, Ill., arrived for careful investors and speculators to get out of the market. More profits may be made on the long side of the market, but the law of averages the chances are that the next large profits will be made on the short and not the long side of the market. This is not saying that it is now time to go short of the market. But it is saying that the present time offers a very good getting off place for careful people.

Humane Official Calls Bull Fight Quarrel 'Absurd'

Tampa, Fla., January 3.—(AP)—Peter O. Knight, president of the Tampa Humane society, declared in a statement today that the row over the sham bull fight here yesterday was "absurd," that the promoter could not be convicted of anything, and that no Florida law had been violated.

Mr. Knight's statement, which clarified the air and corrected wrong impressions of the contest, came after Sheriff L. M. Hiers, of Hillsborough county, had left for Tallahassee on receipt of a sharp telegram from Governor Martin that the executive would take steps tomorrow to obtain a sheriff for this county who could uphold the laws of the state.

Sheriff Hiers, Mr. Knight explained, ordered the promoter to call off the contest "simply because the governor had wired ordering him to do so, and that it was after the sheriff had left the arena, with its 8,000 spectators, most of them Spaniards and Cubans, that the contest was put on as advertised.

The Epworth league of the Eighth Avenue Methodist church adopted resolutions, which were approved by the Englewood Methodist church and Dr. P. P. Hillman, presiding elder of the Tampa district, "denouncing the governor in his efforts to oust Sheriff Hiers from office."

The resolutions set forth that the sheriff had done more toward law enforcement than any other sheriff for many years past.

GOVERNOR MARTIN REFUSES TO TALK

Tallahassee, Fla., January 3.—(AP)—Governor John W. Martin will have nothing more to say regarding his exchange of telegrams with Sheriff L. M. Hiers, of Hillsborough county, over a "bull fight" at Tampa yesterday, until after he has given the sheriff a hearing here tomorrow morning.

This was made plain tonight upon the executive's return from a week-end trip to Jacksonville.

The executive would not discuss the matter, indicating that he preferred to talk with the sheriff first.

CAROL GIVES WIFE COMPLETE LIBERTY

Closely connected sources, he avers, claim there is a greater mystery than the world could possibly surmise.

Vienna, January 3.—(By United News).—Efforts to confirm the report that Premier Bratianu, of Rumania, had resigned elicited brief denials from Rumanian officials.

Since Friday night Bucharest has been cut off by censorship from telegraphic or telephonic communication with the outside world. Communications, presumably, are coming through.

RUMANIANS SIDING WITH CROWN PRINCE.

Rome, January 3.—Rumanians are siding with their departed Prince Carol, according to circulating reports from Bucharest. His renunciation of the throne is reported from Budapest to have a serious background of political conflict and rivalry, and have resulted in the resignation of Premier Bratianu, Carol's principal enemy at court and in politics.

Bratianu, on seeing public opinion openly siding with the seceded prince and against himself, is said to have offered his resignation to the king, with the suggestion that M. Dromulest be his successor. The king is reported to have accepted the resignation and approved Dromulest, although these reports go temporarily without confirmation because of the censorship.

Special press messages from Bucharest discount the official Rumanian version of the renunciation, when the affair was advanced as the cause of the prince's action. The love affair was exploited in Rumanian court circles. It is understood, for the purpose of concealing the truth and the politics of the situation.

The Rumanian press is recalling at great length Carol's interview on the eve of his departure for London, late in November, in which he criticized the Bratianu government and expressed himself in favor of a democratic policy. Carol at that time admitted that the Rumanian people were not yet ready for a republic.

It is anticipated that the government will not be able to forestall the crisis arising from Carol's renunciation, for in spite of the reports of Carol's amour with a "Jewish lady," it is felt that the truth finally will make itself felt.

THOUSANDS SIGN CLEMENCY PLEAS

centary at Macon. The petition circulated here reads in part as follows:

"To the Honorable Clifford W. Ter, governor of the state of Georgia:

"We, the undersigned citizens of Adams county, Illinois, feeling strongly that Ted Coggeshall is innocent of the crime of which he has recently been convicted on the testimony of a youthful accomplice, and on circumstantial evidence, and that he has been unjustly convicted and sentenced to suffer the extreme penalty of death, represent to your honor that we are acquainted with the high standing of the Coggeshall family of Clayton, Illinois; that many of us have known Ted Coggeshall from boyhood; that he is an excellent family, his reputation for peaceableness was good in that community where he lived; that he was known to be of good habits and character, and that it is highly improbable from his antecedents that he would commit so grave an offense as that charged to him with others. We protest that the penalty of death to be inflicted upon him is unjust and contrary to precedent, under all the circumstances and evidence in the case, and that the case is one that calls for executive clemency."

CONVICTED OF MURDER OF LEADING EDUCATOR.

Ted Coggeshall, of Clayton, Ill., and Floyd McElroy, of Brocton, N. Y., were convicted of the murder of Professor W. C. Wright, of Eatonton, who is said to have given them a lift in his automobile, while these two youths, with a companion, were on their way by foot from Tampa, Fla.

north. The companion confessed, accepting a life sentence, and testified against his two associates. After conviction and sentence to the electric chair, the defendants appealed to the supreme court, and lost. They then were brought before Judge Park in Eatonton and resentence to die January 23.

William Schley Howard, attorney for the youths, announced that he would make no further effort to save his clients through courts, but would appeal to the prison commission and governor. The commission is expected to act on the appeal at its meeting this week. The case then will go to the governor.

Governor Walker has been asked to grant the youths a reprieve, but as yet has taken no action on the appeal.

Coggeshall's father and other relatives have spent weeks in Georgia in an effort to aid the young prisoner. Both boys absolutely deny any connection with the murder. They now are in jail in Macon for safe keeping.

METHODIST UNION FAVORED AT MEET

pressed itself as being "opposed to the maintenance of the reserve officers' training camps in all institutions of learning, and particularly in our own church schools."

On the question of race relationship, the findings concluded that "particularly do we feel that the situation in the south, where a backward race lives among us, calls for the finest expression of the Christian spirit of generosity, service and respect. We believe that in this matter, as in others, we must abide by the principles of Jesus, namely, the fatherhood of God and the brotherhood of man, and the supreme value of human personality. We recommend that our church take steps to bring about, as far as possible, equal advantages between the races in education, administration of law in economic matters and in opportunity for self-advancement."

The findings touching on the basis of union stated "while we do not believe in any attempt to merge the different denominations at this time, we go on record as in favor of an increasing cooperation among all the Christian denominations which are dedicated to the same great purpose."

The sermon Sunday morning was delivered by Bishop Warren A. Candler, of Atlanta, Ga., whose text was "The Church of Jesus Christ."

Bishop Candler said he spoke to the young people as contemporaries, as they were all members of the household of faith, which, like any other household, contains members of all ages.

He deprecated the idea of mere geographical extension as a basis of church union and concluded that "there is already unity among all Christians who hold a common experience of the indwelling Christ."

"The big business of the church," he said "is not to reconstruct the world, but to regenerate it."

buildings if the cabinet remained in office.

Shows Desire to Dictate.

Three days later, the Paugalos cabinet was sworn in with the outgoing premier, Michailopoulos, present at the ceremony. Paugalos immediately began evidencing his desire for a dictatorship, although six months were required to bring such a regime into being. The coup of June 25 was virtually bloodless. There was "some shooting, but more as a threat than anything else."

Since the brief Greco-Bulgarian incident of last autumn, when Greek troops moved across the Bulgarian border to right a condition which had evolved from the constant friction between the nationalists on either side, the atmosphere of Athens has been portentous. The league of nations effectively countermanded all Greek desires for war with Bulgaria. Subsequently, a League of Nations commission went over the frontier ground and recommended that Greece be fined as the aggressor. The fine was assessed, to the discomfort of Greece.

Dependent on Good Will.

Greek dependence on her European credit and the good will of the powers is as great as a few months ago, when severe sanctions would have been applied to Greece had she not acquiesced in the league's order to stop fighting. This European control will extend to the present situation, so long as the powers are of one mind and act in concert, if action should become desirable.

KLAN JOINS FORCE AGAINST WORLD COURT

ie interest in the court fight. Despite the large number of petitions and resolutions received by senators, there is little indication of spontaneous interest in the question. Debate has dragged along before partially empty galleries. One reason is that it has been generally felt that the protocol will be approved as soon as senators talk themselves out. Another is that the clash of personalities which made the League of Nations fight so intense is missing. Neither is there partisan factor this time. And the struggle between Coolidge and Borah is not personal. Borah dined at the white house a few nights ago and never has uttered a word that could give offense to Coolidge in a personal way. Likewise Coolidge, feeling that his fight already is won, is taking no part in the senate situation.

INCOME TAX PROVES GEORGIA PROSPERITY

wealth of individuals and business, he said. This state paid more income taxes than Florida, Alabama, Arkansas, South Carolina and Tennessee in the south; more than Colorado and Oregon in the west; more than Iowa and Nebraska, in the middle west, and approximately half million dollars more than the state of West Virginia, with its big industries and immense deposits of coal and other valuable mining resources.

With the exception of Florida, Iowa and Tennessee, taxes paid by individuals amounted to a greater total than in either of the other states listed.

Georgians, Mr. Rose said, are more or less too prone to make comparisons between their own states and adjoining or southern states only, little realizing that the state compares most favorably with those in other sections. Without having at hand actual proof of wealth in various states as provided for tax figures, generally accepted as about the best barometer of such conditions, the average person concedes too often that other states are richer or more powerful or more prosperous than those in other sections, simply by not having first-hand information, the popular tax official explained.

Georgia Retains Position.

At the beginning of the new year when everyone and every business is engaged in "taking stock," actual figures and real facts form a welcome basis for the inventory," Mr. Rose said. "Georgia retains her position as the empire state and these figures may be taken as genuine evidence that the state is in good condition as compared with states, even outside the southern domain."

Mr. Rose's tabulation furnishes abundant proof of the state's position in the sisterhood of states and will be regarded by citizens as substantiating the general belief that the state lags only in a few constructive things, mainly paved highways and a unified and greatly enlarged educational program. Just now there is a state-wide hope that the approaching extraordinary session of the general assembly called to meet on February 24 will take prompt steps to remedy the three outstanding items in Governor Walker's call, namely, highways, education and the Confederate scrip tangle.

Prince of Wales' Attentions Said To Center on Princess From Sweden for His Wife

Princess Astrid, 20, Niece of King of Sweden, Favored as Most Likely Candidate for His Hand.

London, January 3.—(AP)—The matrimonial intentions of Edward, Prince of Wales, which for the last decade have allured or excited all, though they disappointed some of the subjects of his father, King George, are declared by persons close to the court to be centered on his cousin, the little-known Swedish princess, Astrid, niece of the king of Sweden. She is one of the few daughters of royal blood eligible by religion to become the consort of England's heir to the throne. The source of this information would appear to take the edge off recent general denials that there was a possible heart affair between the Prince of Wales and Princess Astrid, and that she contemplated an early visit to England. The princess is known and loved by the British reign, and it is again asserted that she will pay an official visit to London next spring. This will really allow an opportunity for her kindred to know her better and may bring a royal announcement that her royal highness has at last found a Princess of Wales to be.

Whole World Interested.

If and when this announcement is made, England, and in fact, the entire world, will be agog to know truly that this 20-year-old princess of the House of Bernadotte has won this enviable position, into which most of the maidens of royal blood and countless she is known to be a special favorite at Buckingham palace. The late Prince of Astrid to London was before the death of Queen Alexandra, coincident with the return of the Prince of Wales from South America, and it was her and her sister visited the palace as well as Princess Mary's London house. There she met the Prince of Wales and Prince of Wales.

Marriage Would Be Important.

In the terms of that diplomacy in which royal marriages are recorded, the friendship of nations by the marriage of the Prince of Wales and Princess Astrid would be important. In the late war there was a strong German influence in the court of Sweden, possibly heightened by the fact that the queen was German by birth. There are already signs of a rift between England and Sweden, as the crown princess is King George's cousin.

There may be disappointment in some hearts that Wales married other than an English girl, but the precedent of the late Queen Mother Alexandra, who also was a foreigner, would probably make certain a wife, come by the English nation to this girl, whose life and education has been a model sort.

Wales 31 Years Old.

The Prince of Wales is now 31. Not for hundreds of years has the heir to the British throne reached this age without a wife, and if this condition has not bothered him, as his intimate circle, to be the case, it has worked the other way with the British people. Most of the British girls believed at some time to be on the verge of marriage with Wales found mates elsewhere. This, with the collapse of the hopeful enthusiasm which surrounded the visit of the princess of Spain, Belgium, Italy and Rumania to England, made many people believe the story that the prince had declared his intention to marry until he had completed tours over the empire and that he would not take a bride until he loved her.

Princess Astrid has come often to England, and long ago she won a place in the affections of the late Dowager Queen Alexandra. Her domestic talents made an impression on the king and queen, so much so that

EIGHT ARE INJURED IN AUTO ACCIDENT

Eight persons were injured in Sunday auto accidents, three of them in a crash at the intersection of Washita and Euclid avenues.

The injured are: Mrs. C. H. Williamson, of 132 Sinclair avenue, and L. Bousard, of 42 Candler street, who were driving the machines, and Miss Lois Bryant, of 42 Candler street, an occupant of Bousard's car.

Call Officers J. Howell and H. P. Sibley stated that Mrs. Williamson was going south on Washita avenue and Bousard was going west on Euclid. The cars collided at the intersection. Bousard's automobile was overturned by the force of the impact. Both cars were slightly damaged.

Mrs. Williamson stopped her car immediately, picked up the occupants of Bousard's machine and carried them to their residence, where they were placed under care of their family physicians. She then went to police headquarters and reported the accident. No cases were made as the driver of the machine was not determined.

Marshall Holmes, 45, who lives on Pryor street, was treated at Grady hospital Sunday night. He received a blow on the head when he was knocked down by an automobile on Spring street, at Marietta street, he told hospital attendants. The identity of the driver has not been determined.

Burglars Slash Telephone Wires To Delay Pursuit

Cutting the telephone wires so as to stay communication with law authorities was introduced in Atlanta in the early hours of Sunday morning by unidentified burglars who entered the residence of S. L. Seigel, of 115 Washington street.

Entrance was gained through a kitchen window which was "jimmied." The invaders stole a pocketbook containing approximately $18 in cash and two charity boxes containing programs of the Atlanta Y. M. C. A. and had been completely ransacked when members of the family awoke.

W. H. Dodd investigated the burglary and Detectives Lon W. Evans and J. Lewis Whitley were assigned to the case.

GEORGE D. RATTERREE TRIES TO END LIFE

George D. Ratterree, 27, of 46 Kelly street, was carried to Grady hospital Sunday afternoon in a precariously condition as the result of swallowing a quantity of bichloride of mercury at his residence in an alleged attempt to end his life.

Mrs. Parker, his mother, told physicians that Ratterree had been despondent for some time. This condition, she said, resulted from domestic unhappiness.

"He married when he was too young and he and his wife have been separated for some time," she said. "He worried a great deal because he could not see his child, a 5-year-old boy. The child lives with his mother."

Ratterree joined the United States army when 15 years of age and saw service overseas. He was shell-shocked and for several years has been very nervous, according to Mrs. Parker.

Physicians at a late hour Sunday night expressed doubt as to his recovery.

WHITEHALL ST. BLAZE CAUSES $10,000 LOSS

Fire believed to have originated from defective wiring destroyed the stock of goods in the meat market of J. A. Davis, 108 Whitehall street, late Sunday night and badly damaged the building.

The loss is estimated at about $10,000.

The flames were discovered by a passer-by who called to the department. The blaze had gained considerable headway before firemen arrived and considerable difficulty was found in extinguishing the fire. A barber shop adjoining the meat market on Mitchell street was slightly damaged by smoke and water.

CHRIST IS SAME TODAY, FOREVER, ASSERTS PASTOR

Each person is the sum total of their yesterday, words having gone into the building, books into improving the mind, and prayer and study into the soul, Dr. Will H. Houghton, pastor of the Baptist Tabernacle declared in his sermon on "Yesterday and Tomorrow," at the 11 o'clock service Sunday.

Dr. Houghton said, "Jesus Christ, the same yesterday, today and tomorrow."

"The message of this text is a message of changelessness," Dr. Houghton said, "and is not true of any other person, being only true of Deity. All about the world is changing, the very fashion of it is passing away, but Jesus is always the same. At this time as no other we need to be reminded of Jesus' changelessness. Everyone should look away from the changing world, dissolving situations, corruption, to Jesus."

"Jesus is the same today in power as He was in Bible days. He still has the power to save, to keep standing, and to keep us from coming to Him. Jesus is the same today in interest. Every interest He once had He has now, and everything He once did He is doing now. Jesus is the same today in supply and He will supply all our needs according to His riches in glory. God's promises are checks on the bank of heaven. God signed them and all we have to do is to fill them in. Everything God has is yours if you'll just take it," said the minister.

"You already own them, but you don't know it. Let us see whether you possess them or not."

"Yes," said Dr. Houghton, "Jesus is the same yesterday and tomorrow. Yesterday He fed the 5,000. He wept over Lazarus, tomorrow He will weep over your loved ones. Yesterday He told those who labored to come to Him for rest, tomorrow He is saying the same thing to you. Yesterday He told Mary the Magdalene to go and sin no more, tomorrow He will tell you the same thing. Yesterday He told His disciples that He would be with them always, tomorrow you can be sure that He is with you. Yesterday He said 'I am the resurrection and the life, whosoever believeth in me shall live, though he die.' He will go with you into the valley of the shadow of death. Jesus Christ the same yesterday, today, and tomorrow."

Monday night, January 18, the Bible institute of the Baptist tabernacle will again open. During the week, ending January 21, a new teaching the book of John. The institute runs from 7 to 9:15 o'clock each Monday night.

LOT WAS SELFISH MONEY GRABBER, STATES MINISTER

"Lot was a selfish money grabber," said the Rev. J. A. P. in his sermon on "Abraham the Magnanimous," at the 11 o'clock service Sunday night in his sermon on "Abraham the Magnanimous."

"Lot had but one standard for determining his life. When Abraham the magnanimous, peace-loving told him to choose fields for his flocks that he believed in peace between herdsman and between themselves. Lot, with no gratitude for what his uncle had done for him, chose what he considered the best from the material standpoint allowing his Uncle Abraham to take what was left. In his thought only for material prosperity, Lot looked toward Sodom and soon was numbered among its inhabitants, with his life and all he possessed endangered and eventually barely escaped with his life."

"There are multitudes today who like Lot, have but one standard of success in life, that of material possessions and selfishness. This selfish attitude towards life soon leads one to pitch his tent towards the Sodom of sin and worldliness which eventually leaves one as barren as was Lot when he fled from Sodom, stripped of his possessions."

"Abraham's life was a contrast to that of his nephew. He was unselfish, with a true standard of life. He believed and believed not in flocks and herds but in God. As a result he was rewarded. He was given the promise of a son, and today three great religions look back to Abraham as the father of the faithful."
